CHAPTER 1

INTRODUCTION

Film making is a creative form of visual communication that combines storytelling, acting, cinematography, sound, lighting and editing to communicate an idea or experience to an audience. A short film presents a complete story within a limited duration, making it important to develop a clear concept and use every scene effectively. Radio podcasting, on the other hand, communicates stories through audio elements such as narration, dialogue, music, sound effects and silence. Both forms require creativity, planning and effective storytelling.

The project titled “REWORK” is a short thriller film developed as part of the Film Making and Radio Podcasting course. The story begins with a simple and familiar situation in which a boy is working on a video editing project in his room. He receives a phone call informing him that some changes are required in his work. He returns to his laptop and begins reworking the video. After completing the changes, he exports the video and submits it.

The story takes an unexpected turn after the submission. The boy receives a strange notification asking why he sent the video. He is then instructed to watch the last ten seconds of the video. When he watches it again, he notices a mysterious shadow and a figure appearing behind him. Since he knows that he was alone while creating the video, he becomes frightened and confused. Further messages, an unknown phone call and unexplained knocking at the door increase the suspense. The film ends with a mysterious file appearing on his laptop and his own voice coming from the video.

The project is designed not only as a visual short film but also as a story that can be adapted into a radio podcast. The visual elements of the film can be replaced by narration, voice acting, sound effects and background music in the podcast version.

PROJECT OVERVIEW

The main idea of REWORK is to transform an ordinary activity into a mysterious and suspenseful situation. The first part of the film intentionally appears realistic and simple. The audience sees the main character working on a video and assumes that the story is about completing a project. This familiar setting helps the audience connect with the character.

After the video is submitted, the atmosphere gradually changes. The unexpected messages create the first sense of danger. The discovery of the shadow introduces the mystery, while the unknown call and knocking at the door increase the tension. The final scene leaves the audience with questions about who created the mysterious video and how the events are connected.

The film uses a single main location, a small number of characters and easily available objects such as a laptop and mobile phone. This makes the project practical to produce while still allowing different film-making techniques to be demonstrated.

CHAPTER 3

TITLE – DELIVER

The title "The Delivery" appears simple but carries a deeper meaning throughout the documentary. On the surface, it refers to the profession of delivering food from restaurants to customers. However, as the documentary unfolds, the title begins to represent much more than the physical act of transportation.

Every delivery completed by the subject represents responsibility, determination, and survival. Behind every order delivered is a graduate who once believed that education would guarantee a successful career. Instead, circumstances have led him to work in the gig economy while continuing to search for better opportunities.

The title also symbolizes the delivery of hope. Every journey taken by the delivery partner reflects his determination to support himself and his family while refusing to give up on his dreams. Thus, The Delivery becomes a symbol of resilience, hard work, and the ongoing struggle faced by many educated young people in today's society.

CHAPTER 4

GENRE

The documentary belongs to the Social Documentary, Human Interest Documentary, and Educational Documentary genres.

It is categorized as a social documentary because it addresses a real-world issue affecting a large number of educated graduates. The documentary does not rely on fictional storytelling but instead presents actual situations experienced by delivery partners in their everyday lives.

The human interest aspect focuses on the emotions, responsibilities, and aspirations of the subject. Instead of portraying delivery partners only through their profession, the documentary presents them as individuals with dreams, educational backgrounds, and personal struggles.

The educational nature of the documentary helps audiences understand the challenges of unemployment, underemployment, and the rapidly growing gig economy. By encouraging viewers to think critically about these issues, the documentary creates awareness while promoting empathy and respect for honest work.

The film makes use of natural lighting, real locations, observational cinematography, and realistic sound to preserve authenticity and provide an immersive viewing experience.

CHAPTER 5

OBJECTIVES

The primary objective of The Delivery is to create awareness about the increasing number of educated graduates who work as delivery partners because of limited employment opportunities. The documentary aims to present this issue through realistic storytelling rather than fictional drama.

The specific objectives of the documentary are:

- To highlight the everyday life of a delivery partner.
- To create awareness about graduate unemployment.
- To explore the relationship between education and employment.
- To encourage society to respect delivery workers.
- To demonstrate the dignity of honest labour.
- To improve practical knowledge in documentary filmmaking.
- To apply cinematography, editing, sound design, and visual storytelling techniques.
- To develop audience empathy through realistic narratives.

CHAPTER 6

STORY DEVELOPMENT

The documentary follows the daily routine of an educated graduate who currently works as a delivery partner. The story begins with the preparation for work and the beginning of his daily journey through busy city roads. As orders arrive through the delivery application, the documentary captures the continuous process of collecting food, travelling through traffic, and delivering orders to customers.

As the documentary progresses, it reveals that the delivery partner is a qualified graduate who had hoped to build a career based on his education. However, due to limited employment opportunities and financial responsibilities, he was compelled to choose delivery work as his primary source of income.

The documentary showcases the realities of the profession, including long working hours, unpredictable weather conditions, heavy traffic, physical fatigue, and the pressure of earning enough money each day. Despite these challenges, the subject continues his work with determination, believing that every completed delivery brings him one step closer to supporting himself and his family.

Rather than portraying the profession negatively, the documentary celebrates the dignity of labour while drawing attention to the larger issue of unemployment among educated youth. The story concludes by reminding viewers that behind every delivery is a hardworking individual carrying dreams, responsibilities, and hopes for a better future.

CHAPTER 7

STORY SYNOPSIS

STORY SYNOPSIS

The Delivery is a social documentary that presents the untold reality of educated graduates who work as delivery partners due to the lack of suitable employment opportunities. While food delivery services have become an integral part of modern life, the people responsible for delivering these services often remain unnoticed. The documentary focuses on one such graduate and follows his daily routine to reveal the challenges, responsibilities, and sacrifices behind every delivery.

The documentary begins with visuals of a delivery partner preparing for work and travelling through the city. As the day progresses, the audience observes him accepting delivery requests, navigating through heavy traffic, collecting food from restaurants, and delivering orders to customers. These visuals establish the demanding nature of the profession and demonstrate the amount of physical effort, patience, and dedication required to complete each delivery successfully.

As the story unfolds, it is revealed that the delivery partner is an educated graduate who completed his higher education with the hope of securing a stable career. However, due to limited employment opportunities and financial responsibilities, he was unable to find a job related to his qualification. Rather than remaining unemployed, he chose to work as a delivery partner to earn a daily income and support himself.

The documentary captures various moments from his everyday life, including waiting for new orders, travelling long distances, coping with traffic congestion, managing delivery deadlines, and balancing work with personal aspirations. These moments highlight the reality of the growing gig economy and demonstrate how many educated young people depend on temporary employment for survival.

Rather than portraying delivery work negatively, the documentary emphasizes the dignity of honest labour. It shows that every completed delivery represents determination, responsibility, and perseverance. At the same time, it raises awareness about graduate unemployment and encourages viewers to think about the gap between education and employment in today's society.

The documentary concludes by reminding the audience that every order delivered carries much more than food. It carries the dreams, hopes, and hard work of an individual striving to build a better future. Through realistic storytelling and authentic visuals, The Delivery encourages society to appreciate delivery partners and recognize the importance of providing meaningful career opportunities for educated youth.

CHAPTER 8

CHARACTERS

1. Yadhesh S – Delivery Partner (Main Character)

Yadhesh is the central character of the documentary and represents thousands of educated graduates who work as delivery partners due to unemployment. Having completed his higher education, he aspired to secure a professional career that matched his qualifications. However, the lack of employment opportunities forced him to choose delivery work as a means of earning a daily income.

Throughout the documentary, Yadhesh is portrayed as a hardworking, responsible, and determined individual. His daily routine reflects the realities of balancing financial responsibilities while continuing to hope for better career opportunities. His journey symbolizes resilience, dignity, and perseverance in the face of challenging circumstances.

2. Delivery Partners

The documentary also features other delivery partners who represent the broader workforce involved in food delivery services. Their presence illustrates that Yadhesh's story is not an isolated case but a common reality experienced by many educated young people across the country. These visuals strengthen the documentary's message about the growing dependence on gig economy jobs.

3. Customers

Customers appear briefly throughout the documentary as recipients of the delivery service. Their role highlights the relationship between convenience and the unseen effort involved in making online food delivery possible. The documentary encourages viewers to appreciate the dedication of delivery partners while receiving their orders.

9.1 Scene 1 – Beginning the Journey

The documentary opens with visuals of busy roads, moving vehicles, and the delivery partner beginning his day. These introductory shots establish the fast-paced environment in which delivery partners work. The sequence immediately introduces the audience to the world of food delivery while creating curiosity about the individual behind the profession.

9.2 Scene 2 – Daily Work Begins

The delivery partner prepares himself for work by checking his mobile phone for delivery requests. As new orders are received, he starts travelling through different parts of the city. These visuals demonstrate how every working day begins with uncertainty, where income depends entirely on the number of completed deliveries.

9.3 Scene 3 – Education and Reality

The documentary introduces the educational background of the delivery partner by presenting his college identity card and highlighting his qualification. This scene serves as the turning point of the documentary by revealing that he is not simply a delivery worker but an educated graduate who was unable to find employment related to his degree.

9.4 Scene 4 – Everyday Challenges

The documentary continues by showing the delivery partner travelling through traffic, collecting food from restaurants, waiting for customers, and completing deliveries. These visuals represent the physical effort, patience, and time management required in the profession. They also emphasize the uncertainty of daily earnings and the demanding nature of gig economy work.

9.5 Scene 5 – Reality of Survival

As the documentary progresses, it becomes evident that delivery work is not merely a profession but a necessity for survival. Every completed order contributes to the individual's daily income and helps him manage his financial responsibilities while continuing to search for better employment opportunities.

9.6 Scene 6 – Closing Message

The documentary concludes with the delivery partner continuing his journey through the city. The final visuals remind viewers that every delivery represents much more than food. It reflects determination, responsibility, and the dreams of an educated graduate striving to build a better future despite the challenges of unemployment.

CHAPTER 10

CLIMAX AND ENDING

The climax of The Delivery focuses on the emotional realization behind the life of an educated graduate working as a delivery partner. Throughout the documentary, the audience observes his daily routine, physical effort, and commitment to completing deliveries. As the story reaches its conclusion, it becomes evident that the profession is not simply a choice but a necessity driven by unemployment and financial responsibilities.

The final sequence presents the delivery partner continuing his work despite the challenges he faces every day. The visuals show him accepting another delivery request and riding through the city, symbolizing that his journey continues beyond the documentary. Unlike fictional films, the documentary does not provide a dramatic ending or a sudden change in the character's life. Instead, it presents reality as it is, leaving the audience with an opportunity to reflect on the larger social issue.

The ending reinforces the idea that every completed delivery carries much more than food. It represents determination, responsibility, and the hope for a better future. The documentary concludes with a meaningful message encouraging society to respect delivery partners while recognizing the importance of creating employment opportunities for educated graduates.

The final frame displays the message:

"No work is small, but every graduate deserves an opportunity to build a career based on their education."

This ending leaves a lasting emotional impact while successfully conveying the central message of the documentary.

CHAPTER 11

CINEMATOGRAPHY

The cinematography of The Delivery was designed to create a realistic and immersive documentary experience. Since the documentary focuses on real-life situations, natural visuals were preferred over staged or artificial shots. The camera captures the subject in his actual working environment, allowing the audience to experience the daily routine of a delivery partner from a realistic perspective.

A combination of wide shots, medium shots, close-up shots, tracking shots, and point-of-view (POV) shots were used throughout the documentary. Wide shots establish the city environment and illustrate the busy roads through which the delivery partner travels. Medium shots focus on the subject's activities while collecting and delivering orders. Close-up shots emphasize facial expressions, the delivery application, the bike controls, and the college identity card, helping viewers connect emotionally with the character.

Tracking shots were used while riding through the streets to create a sense of movement and involvement. Point-of-view shots from the rider's perspective allow the audience to experience the profession as if they were travelling with the delivery partner. Natural camera movements were maintained to preserve the authenticity of the documentary rather than making the visuals appear overly cinematic.

The documentary was entirely filmed using an Apple iPhone 15 Pro, which provided high-quality video recording, image stabilization, and detailed visuals suitable for documentary filmmaking.

CHAPTER 12

LIGHTING

Lighting plays an important role in maintaining the realistic appearance of the documentary. Since The Delivery captures actual events, natural lighting was primarily used throughout the production. Shooting during daytime allowed the documentary to present the subject's work environment without artificial lighting setups.

Outdoor scenes were illuminated using available sunlight, creating a natural and authentic atmosphere. Restaurant pickup locations, roads, and public places were filmed under existing lighting conditions to preserve realism. Indoor scenes also relied on available ambient light to maintain continuity with the documentary style.

Instead of creating dramatic lighting effects, the documentary focuses on presenting reality exactly as experienced by the delivery partner. This approach enhances the credibility of the film while allowing viewers to observe genuine working conditions without visual exaggeration.

The use of natural lighting also reduced production complexity while contributing to the documentary's realistic visual language.

SOUND DESIGN

Sound design plays a significant role in enhancing the realism of The Delivery. Rather than relying heavily on background music, the documentary incorporates natural environmental sounds that reflect the everyday working conditions of a delivery partner.

Traffic noise, vehicle engines, restaurant ambience, mobile notification sounds, footsteps, conversations, and surrounding city sounds contribute to the authenticity of the documentary. These natural sounds help viewers experience the environment in which the subject works every day.

A soft background music track is introduced at selected moments to support the emotional tone without overpowering the visuals. During important sequences, the background music remains subtle so that the audience remains focused on the subject's journey and experiences.

The balance between ambient sound, narration, interview audio (where applicable), and background music ensures that the documentary remains engaging while preserving its realistic nature.

CHAPTER 14

EDITING TECHNIQUES

Editing was carried out to present the story in a smooth, meaningful, and engaging manner. The objective of editing was not only to arrange the recorded footage but also to create a logical flow that effectively communicates the message of the documentary.

The documentary follows a chronological sequence beginning with the introduction of the delivery partner, followed by his daily routine, educational background, professional challenges, and concluding with the broader issue of graduate unemployment. This structure allows viewers to gradually understand both the individual story and the larger social context.

Straight cuts were primarily used to maintain continuity between scenes. Cross dissolves and fade transitions were introduced at selected points to indicate the passage of time and provide smooth scene transitions. Text overlays were also included to introduce the main subject and emphasize important messages.

Colour correction was performed to maintain consistent brightness and colour tones throughout the documentary. Background music and narration were synchronized carefully with the visuals to enhance the emotional impact while preserving the authenticity of the documentary style.

CHAPTER 15

USE OF PROPS AND LOCATION

The documentary uses real locations and minimal props to preserve authenticity. Since the objective is to present the actual working environment of a delivery partner, no artificial sets or staged environments were created.

The primary locations used include:

- Public roads
- Residential streets
- Restaurant pickup locations
- Food delivery waiting areas
- Commercial streets
- Outdoor resting areas
- College-related location (identity card sequence)

The major props used in the documentary include:

- Motorcycle
- Mobile phone
- Delivery bag
- College Identity Card
- Helmet
- Backpack
- Food packages
- Delivery application interface

These props naturally represent the everyday life of a delivery partner and strengthen the realism of the documentary. By filming in actual working environments, the documentary allows the audience to experience the profession as it truly exists without fictional modifications. The choice of real locations enhances credibility and supports the documentary's objective of creating social awareness about graduate unemployment and the dignity of honest labour.

CHAPTER 16

RADIO PODCAST ADAPTATION

The Delivery documentary can also be adapted into a radio podcast by transforming the visual storytelling into an audio-based narrative. Since radio listeners cannot view visuals, the story must rely on narration, interviews, environmental sounds, and background music to communicate the emotions and message effectively.

The podcast begins with the sounds of busy traffic, motorcycles, mobile notification alerts, and city ambience, immediately placing the listener in the working environment of a delivery partner. A narrator then introduces the topic by explaining the increasing dependence on online food delivery services and the unseen struggles of the individuals behind every order.

The delivery partner's experiences can be shared through a conversational interview, allowing listeners to understand his educational background, reasons for entering delivery work, daily challenges, and future aspirations. Ambient sounds such as restaurant conversations, bike engines, traffic signals, and customer interactions can further enhance realism.

The podcast concludes with a strong social message encouraging listeners to respect delivery partners while raising awareness about graduate unemployment and the importance of providing meaningful career opportunities for educated youth.

CHAPTER 17

RADIO PODCAST SCRIPT APPROACH

The radio adaptation follows a structured storytelling format consisting of narration, interview segments, natural environmental sounds, and background music.

The opening narration introduces the topic and creates curiosity by asking listeners to think beyond the convenience of online food delivery. This is followed by realistic ambient sounds including motorcycle engines, traffic noise, restaurant environments, and mobile notification alerts.

The main section consists of the delivery partner sharing his real-life experiences, educational background, working conditions, and personal aspirations. The narration bridges different sections of the podcast by explaining important situations that would normally be communicated visually in the documentary.

Background music is used only during emotional transitions to maintain audience engagement without distracting from the spoken content. Silence is also used effectively during reflective moments to emphasize important messages.

The podcast ends with a concluding narration reminding listeners that behind every delivery is an educated individual working hard to build a better future.

CHAPTER 18

VOICE AND AUDIO PERFORMANCE

Voice and audio performance play an important role in communicating the emotional depth of The Delivery. Since the documentary is based on real-life experiences, the narration is delivered in a calm, natural, and sincere tone rather than a dramatic style.

The narrator maintains clear pronunciation and moderate pacing to ensure that the audience can easily understand the message. During emotional sections discussing graduate unemployment and personal struggles, the narration becomes slightly softer to encourage empathy.

Environmental sounds including vehicle movement, traffic, restaurant ambience, mobile notification alerts, and conversations are balanced carefully with the narration. Background music is introduced only when necessary to enhance emotional impact while allowing the natural sounds to remain dominant.

The combination of narration, ambient sound, and subtle background music creates an immersive listening experience while preserving the documentary's authenticity.

CHAPTER 19

PRODUCTION PROCESS

The production of The Delivery was completed in three stages: pre-production, production, and post-production.

During the pre-production stage, the documentary concept was finalized after identifying graduate unemployment as an important social issue. The storyline, shooting schedule, locations, and equipment requirements were planned. Permission was obtained from the delivery partner to document his daily routine, ensuring that all footage represented genuine experiences.

The production stage involved filming the subject during his normal working hours. Various real-life activities including travelling, accepting orders, restaurant pickups, waiting periods, and deliveries were recorded using an Apple iPhone 15 Pro. Additional establishing shots of roads, traffic, restaurants, and surrounding environments were also captured to strengthen the visual narrative.

During post-production, the recorded footage was reviewed and arranged according to the planned storyline. Unnecessary clips were removed, transitions were added, colour correction was performed, background music was synchronized, and titles and captions were included. The final documentary was exported after multiple reviews to ensure smooth storytelling and technical quality.

CHAPTER 20

CHALLENGES FACED

Several challenges were encountered during the production of The Delivery documentary.

One of the major challenges was filming in busy public areas while ensuring the safety of both the subject and the camera operator. Heavy traffic, changing weather conditions, and crowded locations required careful planning and patience during shooting.

Capturing natural moments without interrupting the delivery partner's work was another significant challenge. Since the documentary focused on real-life situations, scenes had to be recorded without affecting the subject's daily routine.

Audio recording also presented difficulties due to surrounding traffic noise, vehicle sounds, and public conversations. Appropriate editing techniques were later used to improve audio clarity while preserving the natural atmosphere.

Managing battery life, storage space, and maintaining stable footage during moving shots were additional technical challenges throughout the production process.

Despite these difficulties, careful planning, teamwork, and repeated shooting sessions helped achieve the desired documentary outcome.

CHAPTER 21

LEARNING OUTCOMES

The production of The Delivery provided valuable practical knowledge in documentary filmmaking and visual storytelling.

The project enhanced skills in planning, cinematography, composition, and observational filming techniques. It also improved understanding of camera movement, natural lighting, framing, and recording real-life situations without disturbing the subject.

The editing process strengthened knowledge of video sequencing, pacing, colour correction, sound synchronization, and background music selection. The project also demonstrated the importance of storytelling in communicating social issues effectively.

Most importantly, the documentary created greater awareness about graduate unemployment and helped develop empathy toward delivery partners. It reinforced the understanding that documentary filmmaking is not only about recording events but also about presenting meaningful social messages through realistic storytelling.

CHAPTER 22

EXPECTED OUTCOME

The primary expected outcome of The Delivery is to create awareness about the lives of educated graduates who work as delivery partners due to limited employment opportunities.

The documentary aims to encourage viewers to appreciate the dedication and hard work involved in food delivery services while understanding the broader issue of graduate unemployment. It also seeks to promote respect for all professions and eliminate negative perceptions associated with delivery work.

Academically, the project demonstrates practical knowledge of documentary production, cinematography, editing, sound design, and visual communication. Socially, it encourages empathy, responsibility, and appreciation for honest labour.

It is expected that the documentary will inspire viewers to look beyond the convenience of online food delivery and recognize the human effort behind every completed order.

CHAPTER 23

CONCLUSION

The Delivery successfully presents the everyday reality of educated graduates who work as delivery partners due to unemployment and financial responsibilities. Through realistic visuals, observational cinematography, and authentic storytelling, the documentary highlights a growing social issue that often remains unnoticed.

The project demonstrates that while delivery work is an honest and respectable profession, many individuals enter it because they lack opportunities related to their education. By documenting the daily routine of a graduate working as a delivery partner, the film bridges the gap between customer convenience and the unseen effort required to provide that service.

The documentary also provided valuable experience in planning, filming, editing, sound design, and documentary production. More importantly, it reinforced the importance of using filmmaking as a medium for creating awareness and encouraging positive social change.

Overall, The Delivery reminds viewers that behind every order delivered is not just food, but the determination, responsibility, dreams, and perseverance of an individual striving for a better future.

"Every delivery tells a story. Respect the person behind it."
